UN GETS NEW SOVIET PLAN

Election Office In High Gear

Tarlton To Get Most Ballots

Busiest woman in Pickaway County is Mrs. Walter Stout, clerk of the board of election, whose activities swung into high gear Monday as national election day loomed only seven days away.

Assisting with the stacks of daily mail, typing reports and master sheet abstracts and handling absentee and disabled ballot voters is Mrs. Gladys Wiggins.

Together the two women are putting in more than their share of an eight-hour day as the press of election affairs mounts higher in Pickaway County as well as throughout the nation.

Distribution of the county's 16,050 ballots and supplies will be made between 1 p. m. and 2 p. m. Saturday at the board of election office to the 41 presiding precinct judges.

TARLTON village voters this election will be handed six ballots, two more than any other Pickaway County subdivision voter. The two extra ballots are for a decision on local option and C and D liquor permits.

All others will receive the presidential, state, judicial or non-partisan and local issue ballots.

On the latter will appear the

Mansfield Union Snubs Leftwing UEW's Dictates

MANFIELD, Oct. 25 — The Westinghouse local of the CIO United Electrical Workers, disregarding the expressed wishes of its parent organization, today barred Communists from holding office in the union.

The local amended its constitution despite handbills passed out at the union hall door by representatives of the union's international and of the district headquarters pleading against such action. The international has taken an official stand against signing non-Communist affidavits.

The affidavits are required under the Taft-Hartley law if a union wishes the services of the National Labor Relations Board.

Joseph Hawkins of Mansfield presided over the meeting which was attended by about 100 of the local's claimed 600 members. However, the attendance was about twice that attending routine meetings.

The meeting also adopted resolutions opposing Henry A. Wallace for President and endorsing the CIO-PAC-endorsed candidates.

No Rivalry Between Yank, Russian Soldiers In Berlin, U. S. GIs Say

Much of the war scare between the Americans and Russians over the Berlin blockade is the fault of news correspondents overplaying isolated violations in the two zones.

This was the opinion of three U. S. Army sergeants who are back in the States on a recruitment program for their units now stationed in various parts of Germany.

In Circleville Saturday for the Pumpkin Show were T-Sgt. Julian Johnson, Danville, Va., with the U. S. Constabulary; T-Sgt. Silas Singleton, Lynchburg, Va., and S-Sgt. Wade Lehr, York, Pa., with the First Infantry Division.

The three men agreed "there is no friction between the American and Russian soldiers—Matter of fact relations are on a friendly basis," they declared.

"We are always exchanging greetings as we stand guard on either side of the line separating the two zones."

"We speak no Russian and few of them speak any English, but a 'Hi Joe' seems to be understood in any language. We swap cigarettes and candy bars and we have seen no bitterness."

"Our opinion—and this does not represent the Army or the U. S. government—is that any existing differences are purely political and in higher levels," the three men asserted.

They said frankly there was little fear of war among the troops now in Germany. Singleton put it this way:

"Do you think for one minute our government would permit wives and children dependents of our soldiers to go overseas and live in Germany if there were any real danger of conflict?"

He said boats are arriving every week loaded with dependents. Since the airlift began in Berlin only about eight families

U.S. Delegate Sees Agreement

PARIS, Oct. 25—Soviet Russia offered the Western Powers a token lifting of the Berlin blockade today in return for a concession on currency negotiations.

The offer, made by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky, was accompanied by a blunt hint that its acceptance is the only alternative to a Soviet veto of the small nations' compromise proposal drafted by UN Security Council Chairman Juan A. Bramuglia.

There was a wide divergence of opinion as to the possibility of success arising from the Soviet plan.

U. S. Delegate Dr. Philip C. Jessup was asked flatly whether he thought there was a chance of reaching agreement. He said: "Yes, I think so."

Vishinsky staged an intensive campaign to put across his proposal. Bramuglia agreed to present it to the Western Powers with some changes of his own, thus transforming it into a new formula.

It was understood that under the proposal the great six-lane autobahn superhighway connecting Berlin with Western Germany

Soviet Bloc Loses Again

Puppet States Denied Debate

PARIS, Oct. 25 — The Soviet bloc suffered a sharp defeat today and faced the virtual certainty of another in the United Nations Political Committee.

The defeat came when the committee refused to permit Albania and Bulgaria to take part in its debate on the Balkan problem.

Headed today apparently inevitable setback was a Yugoslav demand that a representative of Great Britain, Gen. Markos Vafthiades be heard by the 58-nation body.

Both issues roused stormy debate in the committee.

British Minister of State Hector McNeill denounced the Yugoslav proposal "abuse of the committee's time and effrontery."

He added: "Mister Markos is neither a general nor the president of a government. His sole title is that with which brigands, privateers, and swashbucklers have always invested themselves."

"Markos is not even a decent brigand but a puppet."

"Why hear the puppet when we have the masters?"

POLAND'S Julius Katz-Suchy attacked McNeill for his "insults and abuses instead of arguments," he said that Markos merited the title of general.

New Hollander Dies In Crash

LONDON, Oct. 25—Floyd C. Stevenson, 67, of New Holland, was reported killed Monday in a traffic accident just outside the Mt. Sterling village limits in Southern Madison County.

The state highway patrol said Stevenson's pickup truck struck a bridge on Route 277.

14,200 Slabs Of Pumpkin Pie Sold During Festival

Approximately 14,200 slabs of pumpkin pie were sold in two booths during the 1948 Circleville Pumpkin Show.

Youth Canteen Booth on West Main street was the largest seller, having passed 1,400 of the pies over the counter, a total of 8,800 nickel slices.

Second in sales, but at a more conventional price and slice, was the Pickaway County Children's Home Booth on North Court street, which sold nearly 400 of the pies, or a total of about 2,400 slices.

An estimated 3,000 slabs of the pie were sold in scattered other booths, sandwich shops and restaurants.

While the Canteen booth specialized in sale of pies, accompanying the pie sale only with coffee, the Children's Home booth sold innumerable sandwiches, coffee and soft drinks.

WINFIELD Koch, superintendent of the Home, said Monday he had been offered the same location and facilities for next year's show, and has already promised to be back again.

The booth and lot were donated to the Home by various Circleville organizations, and pies were supplied by the same businessmen and Pumpkin Show, Inc.

Charles Hartley, 54-year-old Urbana man working with Gooding Amusement Co. during Pumpkin Show, suffered the only serious injury reported during the festivities.

Police said the man had been operating the "Loop-O-Plane" ride in front of Weaver

Cleveland To Be Political Center; 4 Top Candidates Book Speeches

By International News Service
Ohio's political spotlight swung toward Cleveland today as the election campaign entered its final full week.

President Truman, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Gov. Thomas Herbert and Former Gov. Frank J. Lausche all will be in the nation's sixth city before the Nov. 2 general election.

Cleveland casts about one-sixth of the total Ohio vote, and both Herbert, seeking reelection on the Republican ticket, and Lausche, the Democratic nominee for the third consecutive time, will go all out for all they can get of that huge hunk of votes.

Lausche is favored to come out of the usually Democratic city with a whopping big majority. The question is, can that majority offset Herbert pluralities downstate? A flip of a coin would give as good an answer as anything or anybody could today.

PRESIDENT Truman, on his final campaign swing, will make speeches in Toledo, Sandusky and Elria tomorrow with his main address scheduled for Cleveland in the evening.

Lausche will board the presidential special in Toledo and remain with Mr. Truman during the trip across Ohio, to the intense anguish of some of his advisers.

Most observers give Republican Presidential nominee Dewey a plurality of around 200,000 votes in Ohio, and there are those in Lausche's retinue who fear the Lausche-Truman tie-up will cost the former governor votes.

Dewey will be in Cleveland the following day with his main address scheduled for Wednesday evening.

OLD AND YOUNG, they were eating pumpkin pie at last week's Pumpkin Show. One of them was Patrick Rooney, four-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rooney of Circleville. Pat had no more than finished this slab than he wanted more.

EVERYBODY had a lot of fun at the Pumpkin Show. Mrs. Marian Miller and her daughter tried out one of the many rides, had a gay old time.

PUMPKIN SOUP was an innovation at the 1948 Pumpkin Show. The woman above was the cause of it all. She is a native of France, a war bride, married to Howard Glitt of Circleville. The word got out that Pumpkin Soup was a fine delicacy. Mrs. Glitt told Circleville Kiwanians how it was made, club members brewed a batch and it sold easily during the street festival. Above, Mrs. Glitt gives her husband a sample. He still likes it.

BIGGEST PUMPKIN displayed at last week's show here was this 103-pounder brought in by Doc Moler of Brown County. With it is Marilyn Schumm of Circleville, ready to set her teeth into a slab of pumpkin pie.

THOUSANDS of pumpkin pies were produced last week by the Wallace Bakery here. Ralph Wallace is shown with a rack of 100 of them. He and his father, Ed Wallace, were pair of busy boys. They turned out hundreds of pies.

MONSTER PUMPKINS all around him and he had a great time. He is Brad Schneider, 2 1/2, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Schneider of Circleville. Brad climbed up in the display at the Pumpkin Show, took a better look.

Johnson's outfit is doing patrol duty along the northern boundary of the American-Russian zone. As for zonal violations, he said:

"Russian and American soldiers cross the lines every day—it is not uncommon, but the newspapers play up the arrests. It's our order to arrest the Russian soldier who crosses the line the same as it is in the Russian zone."

"Instead of all this formality, it probably would be just as good if we turned the trespasser around and gave him a kick in the seat of the pants."

"We all were surprised to see the big headlines in U. S. papers every day about such minor incidents, but I guess the newspapers have to have something to write about," Johnson declared.

Singleton and Lehr with the First Infantry Division, one of the most decorated in the European theatre of operations, are assigned to garrison duty with their outfits.

"We don't have any serious trouble with the Russians and the Germans respect us. The German people are doing a wonderful job in cleaning up their cities of the rubble and now are rebuilding," they said.

They all agreed that the Russians will effect an agreement with the Allies very soon and lift the blockade of Berlin. And here is why, they believe:

"Now that the Russians have stripped their sectors of all equipment and machinery that is usable, they'll permit a Four Power agreement that might open Red areas for inspection."

"The airlift knocked the Communists back on their heels and was a big boost to U. S. prestige and German morale in Berlin. Provisions are better than average in the German capital," they agreed.

Before the currency conversion in June, nearly everything in Germany was sold in the black market and the stores were bare. Now, they say, the stores are filled with all sorts of goods.

The men are here to cover the entire Second Army area—Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia. They arrived in the States by plane July 25 and will return to Europe in December.

3 Drivers Pay Fines In Court

Three Columbus traffic violators doled out a total of $135 and costs in Circleville mayor's court over Pumpkin Show weekend.

First to face Mayor Thurman I. Miller was Russell W. Taggart, 55, who was fined $100 and costs for driving while drunk on U. S. Route 23. He was apprehended by State Highway Patrolman Clyde Wells.

Wells also took the second offender, John J. Murray, into custody for failure to register his auto. Murray was fined $25 and costs.

Joseph E. Welker was fined $10 and costs in the court for passing in a non-passing zone on U. S. Route 23 north of Circleville.

No Rivalry In Berlin, U.S. GIs Say have left that area—not because of danger, but because of normal transfers.

Johnson's outfit is doing patrol duty along the northern boundary of the American-Russian zone. As for zonal violations, he said:

"Russian and American soldiers cross the lines every day—it is not uncommon, but the newspapers play up the arrests. It's our order to arrest the Russian soldier who crosses the line the same as it is in the Russian zone."

"Instead of all this formality, it probably would be just as good if we turned the tress passer around and gave him a kick in the seat of the pants."

"We all were surprised to see the big headlines in U. S. papers every day about such minor incidents, but I guess the newspapers have to have something to write about," Johnson declared.

Singleton and Lehr with the First Infantry Division, one of the most decorated in the European theatre of operations, are assigned to garrison duty with their outfits.

"We don't have any serious trouble with the Russians and the Germans respect us. The German people are doing a wonderful job in cleaning up their cities of the rubble and now are rebuilding," they said.

They all agreed that the Russians will effect an agreement with the Allies very soon and lift the blockade of Berlin. And here is why, they believe:

"Now that the Russians have stripped their sectors of all equipment and machinery that is usable, they'll permit a Four Power agreement that might open Red areas for inspection."

"The airlift knocked the Communists back on their heels and was a big boost to U. S. prestige and German morale in Berlin. Provisions are better than average in the German capital," they agreed.

Before the currency conversion in June, nearly everything in Germany was sold in the black market and the stores were bare. Now, they say, the stores are filled with all sorts of goods.

The men are here to cover the entire Second Army area—Maryland, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia. They arrived in the States by plane July 25 and will return to Europe in December.

Kid Champs Selected In Contests

Heiskell Mishap Draws Big Laugh

Champions in bubblegum blowing, pie-eating, hog-calling and balloon-bursting events emerged Saturday after rigorous competition at Main and Scioto streets. They were some of the last events of the 1948 Pumpkin Shows.

Winners in the various events were Benny Elmar of Wayne-Township school, Adelaide Miller of near Ashville, John Blevins of Circleville, Charles Wooten of WilliamSPORT, Ed Counts of near Chillicothe and Ned Young of Circleville.

Although the 112 contestants competing for titles and prizes gave the throngs assembled ample entertainment, no event drew as much attention or applause as when John Heiskell, master of ceremonies for the show, turned in an impromptu acrobatic act.

Heiskell, who had been standing near the edge of the platform during hog-calling contest, suddenly disappeared from sight, having toppled backward into the crowd.

Arising unhurt, Heiskell rushed back onto the stand to continue the event.

BENNY ELMAR, tow-headed bubblegum artist, blew but five bubbles in competition to win his title. His first bubble won him a place in the semifinals, his second took him into the finals, and three more blows gave him the title. He edged out Donna Jean Moore, also of Wayne Township and champion girl bubble-blower, in the finals.

Second event, the pie-eating test, found Miss Miller copping the title uncontested for the winner of the girls' division, although John Blevins and Charles Wooten ran a dead heat for boys' division champ.

Freddie Davis, 1947 Pumpkin Show pie-eating champ, was disqualified when he dropped his pie on the platform.

Ed Counts, defending champion from 1947 Pumpkin Show hog-calling contest, defended his title in the Saturday contest,

Professor Claims Poet Was Not A Rake Or Toss-pot

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 25 — A contention that Edgar Allen Poe, famed American poet, was neither the rake nor the toss-pot he has been painted was made today by Dr. John W. Ostrom of Wittenberg college.

Dr. Ostrom, acting head of Wittenberg's English department, paints a more favorable picture of Poe in a two-volume 664-page book entitled "The Letters of Edgar Allen Poe," published today by Harvard University Press.

Dr. Ostrom said today that while Poe may have been a griper, he was not only destitute but sick most of the time.

"His letters," the professor said, "give no indication that he was either a confirmed drunkard or a drug addict, and they do indicate that he was unfaithful to his wife." Dr. Ostrom said that Poe's "so-called affairs with women" apparently came after his wife's death.

The Wittenberg professor declared that, "it is evident that Poe did drink, but even a little alcohol seems to have made him sick."

walking away with the $5 first prize money.

Second in the event was Bob Mowery of Upper Arlington, who received $3 for his calls, while Freeman Marshall of Stoutsville copped the $1 third-place award.

Ned Young of 464 East Franklin street walked away with the top title in balloon-blowing competition, defeating Janis Huffer of South Scioto street in the finals. Miss Huffer had wrested the title of "champ in the girls' division.

WINTER PROOFING!

Right This Way...

WINTER weather on its way—
"Get well covered" is our say.
Ice and snow and sleet and hail—
Put some cars and trucks in jail.
Winds will blow and drifts will pile—
Take it all with a beaming smile.
Winter Proofing—is what we give
That trucks and cars may really live.
Engines tuned to a pleasant song
Bumpers tight, (and nothing wrong).

Brakes that never slip or pull,
Lights that beam with power
that's full.

Why not get yourself this cover—
Bodies clean and bright all over,
Go ahead and buck the breeze,
Your cooling has its anti-freeze.
Your pleasure will not easy spoil
For you have winter grease

Kid Champs Selected In Contests

Heiskell Mishap Draws Big Laugh

Champions in bubblegum blowing, pie-eating, hog-calling and balloon-bursting events emerged Saturday after rigorous competition at Main and Scioto streets. They were some of the last events of the 1948 Pumpkin Shows.

Winners in the various events were Benny Elmar of Wayne Township school, Adelaide Miller of near Ashville, John Blevins of Circleville, Charles Wooten of Williamsport, Ed Counts of near Chillicothe and Ned Young of Circleville.

Although the 112 contestants competing for titles and prizes gave the throngs assembled ample entertainment, no event drew as much attention or applause as when John Heiskell, master of ceremonies for the show, turned in an impromptu acrobatic act.

Heiskell, who had been standing near the edge of the platform during hog-calling contest, suddenly disappeared from sight, having toppled backward into the crowd.

Arising unhurt, Heiskell rushed back onto the stand to continue the event.

BENNY ELMAR, tow-headed bubblegum artist, blew but five bubbles in competition to win his title. His first bubble won him a place in the semifinals, his second took him into the finals, and three more blows gave him the title. He edged out Donna Jean Moore, also of Wayne Township and champion girl bubble-blower, in the finals.

Second event, the pie-eating test, found Miss Miller copping the title uncontested for the winner of the girls' division, although John Blevins and Charles Wooten ran a dead heat for boys' division champ.

Freddie Davis, 1947 Pumpkin Show pie-eating champ, was disqualified when he dropped his pie on the platform.

Ed Counts, defending champion from 1947 Pumpkin Show hog-calling contest, defended his title in the Saturday contest.

Professor Claims Poet Was Not A Rake Or Toss-pot

SPRINGFIELD, Oct. 25 — A contention that Edgar Allen Poe, famed American poet, was neither the rake nor the toss-pot he has been painted was made today by Dr. John W. Ostrom of Wittenberg college.

Dr. Ostrom, acting head of Wittenberg's English department, paints a more favorable picture of Poe in a two-volume 664-page book entitled "The Letters of Edgar Allen Poe," published today by Harvard University Press.

Dr. Ostrom said today that while Poe may have been a griper, he was not only destitute but sick most of the time.

"His letters," the professor said, "give no indication that he was either a confirmed drunkard or a drug addict, and they do indicate that he was unfaithful to his wife." Dr. Ostrom said that Poe's "so-called affairs with women" apparently came after his wife's death.

The Wittenberg professor declared that, "it is evident that Poe did drink, but even a little alcohol seems to have made him sick."

walking away with the $5 first prize money.

Second in the event was Bob Mowery of Upper Arlington, who received $3 for his calls, while Freeman Marshall of Stoutsville copped the $1 third-place award.

Ned Young of 464 East Franklin street walked away with the top title in balloon-blowing competition, defeating Janis Huffer of South Scioto street in the finals. Miss Huffer had wrested the title of "champ in the girls' division."

TWO PARTIES OR THREE?

THE breach between Democrats and Dixiecrats is widening. Plans are announced whereby, after election, the Democratic National Committee will drop those members who bolted to support Thurmond and Wright. Chief among the number will be Gov. Thurmond himself, the Democratic national committeeman from South Carolina. The argument, difficult to resist, is that the Dixiecrats have a perfect right to form a new party, but that they cannot do this and maintain their full rights in the party they have left.

Will the Dixiecrats continue to function as a separate party after this election, thus bringing the two-party system to the South? Or will they align themselves with the Republicans, with whom they have been voting in Congress for some years?

The Dixiecrats thus have at least three choices for the future: rejoin the Democrats, join the Republicans, or continue as a separate party. Some will no doubt try to keep their standing in the Democratic organization. Unless the Democratic leaders change their minds, the bolters are not likely to find the front door standing open.

HONORED HORSES

THE horse, who was man's dearest animal companion until the automobile came along, rarely had the recognition he deserved. Now Bamieca, the horse of Spain's national hero, the Cid, who in the eleventh century was the champion against the Moors, is to have a monument erected by Spain's wealthiest nobleman, the Duke of Alba.

Only two other horses, so far as known, have received comparable honor after their death. Alexander the Great founded the city of Bucephalia in India and named it after his steed Bucephalus. And at Lexington, Va., Washington and Lee University commemorates both Gen. Robert E. Lee, its former president, and Lee's horse, Traveller, as familiar a sight to Southern soldiers on the battle lines as Lee himself. Traveller's skeleton, mounted, stands in the university chapel museum as a recognition that he contributed to his master's greatness.

OLD STORY IN RUSSIA

"In recent years Russia has been like a dormitory in a police station. If someone tried to get up and say a human word, it was regarded as a disturbance of order and security. It called forth only a threatening snarl: 'Mouth shut! Keep down there!' and a powerful hand would push down the lifted head."

This was not written of today, although it might apply. It was written of the tsardom in 1904 by the liberal Prince Trubetskoi. Tyranny in Russia is not a diabolical recent invention, but an ill with which Russian society has been afflicted for centuries.

Range to Five Billions
Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—One of the big legislative battles which preceded World War II seems due for repetition in 1949. This will be regardless of whether Gov. Thomas E. Dewey or President Truman is elected to the presidency.

The battle will be over a multi-billion dollar rearmament program for non-Communist Europe. It will amount to a revival of Lend-Lease, about which a heated dispute arose in the months preceding Pearl Harbor. However, it will hardly be styled Lend-Lease. It will probably call for outright grants.

GOP leaders in Congress say they expect Governor Dewey to submit a program if he is elected, as they assume he will be. The Truman administration has long been at work on such a plan. Estimates of the cost range from two to five billion dollars. Opposition is looked for from many Republicans and Democrats, particularly since it would probably rule out any further tax cut.

● NAVY-AIR FORCE BATTLE—Despite all reports to the contrary, the controversy over which service arm will carry the atomic bomb, if any future ones are dropped, has flared to white heat the old feud between the Navy and the Air Force. The rivalry between these services will be a major problem for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to solve if he is elected to the presidency Nov. 2.

The Navy's bid for carrying the bomb arises from the performance expected of the new giant 65,000-ton aircraft carrier, which incidentally will not be finished until 1952. Its argument is that the big

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The other day in Canton, Ohio, a friend said, "Here's a dollar!" and he handed me a $2 bill. He was having some fun, but it was serious fun because he was just about right. Nevertheless, it might have been very much worse: The dollar might have fallen much lower in purchasing power considering the fact that our national debt amounts to $6,303 per American family. That is a reduction from over $7,000 per family in 1946.

Most of that debt is due to inflationary war spending. This government spending out of taxes and loans was, of course, unprecedented and in a measure still continues in our huge expenditures for veterans, for national defense and for ECA. These might be termed war-continuation expenditures.

We go in for fancy words these days and one of them is "dilution of the dollar." By that is meant that the dollar is not worth as much as it used to be, say in the year 1939. It will remain diluted as long as the war-continuation expenditures are being paid out. Undoubtedly the next item in this direction will be the rearming of the nations of Western Europe. There will be some fancy phrase for that, but it will only mean adding on to the Marshall Plan some more billions in the war-continuation expenditures.

The principal items making your dollar worth less are:

1. War-continuation expenditures;
2. The fact that currency and bank deposits have increased faster than the volume of production and business;
3. Pressure for higher wages;
4. Government subsidy and price support for farmers
5. Excessively easy mortgage credit;
6. A non-competitive price which always exists in a seller's market;
7. High cost of government.

Some of these problems are not so serious at this moment; some we can do nothing about; some can be solved by sound administration. Certainly the extravagant cost of government can be reduced. Farm subsidies were intended to sustain farmers against the dangers of a "bust" market; there can be no justification for continuing this system with regard to commodities that are so high as to be almost out of reach.

The Committee on Public Debt Policy shows that if we take the year 1914 as a base and find that the American dollar was worth $1 in that year, then it was worth after two wars:

- 50 cents in 1920
- 57 cents in 1926
- 78 cents in 1933
- 72 cents in 1939
- 42 cents in June, 1948.

It is doing a little better now, but this is not a happy picture. It is also interesting to note that as wages have risen, as between 1939 and 1948, the purchasing power of the dollar has gone down.

That means that although the worker has more money, he buys less for it. When the same piece of steak costs 49 cents a pound one year and $1 a pound the next year, the dollar has been diluted—plenty.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

BRAD HAD MADE her rest after her bath and now it was close to the time when they would be expected by the Wades. Gail finished dressing and they went downstairs to look in on Alexandria and Millicent before leaving. It was unfortunate that, after a pleasant dinner, the Wades' neighbors, from the next-door apartment, dropped in.

"I asked them," Mrs. Wade told Gail, "as you and Betty know each other and she's anxious to see you again. They moved here last fall, we became corridor and elevator acquaintances. They seem exceptionally nice and have a charming little boy."

"Betty?" asked Gail, and no warning bell rang in her mind, occupied with other matters.

"Her name is Rolland," said Mrs. Wade, "but we're already on an informal basis. Surely you remember her... small, fair, looking younger than she probably is? She was married before, she told me, to a newspaperman. He's been very successful lately... I don't remember his name."

"Sam Meredith," said Gail. "Of course, I'd forgotten Betty's married name." She was aware of Brad's quick glance at her as he sat across the room smoking with, and talking to, his host.

"Rolland is likable," said Wade. "He's in the insurance business. He hooked me, almost before I knew it, not long after they moved here. As a matter of fact, he did me a real service."

Gail said, "I'd like to see Betty again."

She saw her, shortly afterwards, looking blooming, as blonde, almost as childish in appearance, but a little rounder in figure. She and her husband greeted Gail with cordiality, and Betty said, "It's wonderful seeing you. I assure you I meant to write at the time of your marriage but young Pete was busy having measles."

They had no time alone until Gail was ready to leave, when Betty followed her into the Wade guest room. She asked, "Do you mind my saying how glad I am for you? I was afraid it would be Sam."

"It wasn't," said Gail evenly.

"Obviously," said the indications... I mean, you can't help hearing things. Well, you're safe, I'm safe, and Sam's God knows where, California, or was it North Dakota? I don't read him. I used to and maybe it's silly of me, but I just don't any more. I wish you'd come to see us, Gail. I like your husband so much. He and Peter got along famously. I warned Peter, I said, 'If you try to sell him insurance, I'll break your neck.' Anyway, do come. Young Pete's at the entertaining if destructive stage, which reminds me we left my sister with him, not that he needs a sitter when we're next door, his lungs are all right."

Gail said she would and presently found herself in the car, driving home. The night was cool and damp, the sky obscured with clouds. And Brad commented: Copyright 1947, 1948, by Faith Baldwin Cuthrell. Published by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"The Rollands are all right... he's a sound egg, and as for his wife, I always liked Sam's taste in girls."

"She's nice," Gail said. "I never knew her well, of course. As a matter of fact, I met her before I met Sam."

She thought with a sudden desperate longing of Sam, not for him exactly, but for his way of life, his unconcern, his blunt, unvarnished attitude... his crazy vigor and lack of veneer. Sam would fight with her, laugh at her, be crazy jealous of any man who'd ever meant anything to her, Sam would wound, neglect and sacrifice her, but he would never conceal himself behind a mask nor armor himself against her. As for her father, Sam would say, The heck with him, and mean just that.

She thought with a terrifying clarity that perhaps she was truly her father's child. Her mother had desired only love for love, and security. Gail had believed that she too wished security, if without love. But her father had never wanted anything except to be free, and alive, and heedless. Perhaps, basically, that was what she wished, the other desires having been imposed upon her. For certainly, ever since Morrison Rogers' appearance, she had felt trapped... not by her father's motivated return but by the Spencers... the close corporation, forbearance, and most unendurable, by her own impatient sense of inadequacy and guilt.

Toward noon on the following morning the telephone rang and Gail, writing letters in her sitting room, answered. Andrews' voice cut in, he apologized and hung up but Gail heard a click as if someone had taken an instrument from an extension. It was not replaced.

"Gail?" Brad asked. "Everything all right, dear?"

"Did you have a bad time?" she inquired. "Oh, Brad, I'm so glad you called. I've been sitting on the edge of a volcano ever since you left this morning."

"I couldn't call you before, the business has just been concluded. I'd rather not go into details now, so I'll tell you tonight. Wait a moment—what are you doing this afternoon?"

"Lunching with Pat and her mother first, then we're going on to a fitting."

"I'd forgotten. Why don't you meet me at the St. Regis around half past five? Pat and her mother, too, if they can come. We'll all have a drink and then you and I can come home together."

"I'd love to," she said and added, because it was a long time until five-thirty, "Just tell me one thing... where is he, Brad?"

"In good hands, with a personal courier. By the time I see you he will have been seen off on the Commodore Vanderbilt... Hold on a moment, will you?"

While she waited, she felt that someone waited with her, holding his or her breath. Hers of course, and Brad's.

Gail thought angrily. Brad spoke again. "Hello?" he said. "There's a long distance call coming through, Gail. Bye, dear, I'll see you this afternoon."

She hung up and then went downstairs to the morning room. Alexandria would expect a report however superfluous Gail considered the gesture. She knocked at the closed door, was bidden to enter, and went in to find Alexandria surrounded by mail and papers and Millicent hunched resignedly over the desk.

"Brad just called," Gail said. And stifled the impulse to say, Suppose you tell me what he said?

Alexandria rattled newspapers, pushed the heap of envelopes aside, invited Gail to sit down. Then she asked pleasantly, "Millicent, would you please go upstairs and get me a handkerchief?"

Alexandria's handkerchief was in plain sight on the arm of her chair, a large square of fine, monogrammed linen. Gail's eyes sought and Millicent's eyes avoided it. For if Alexandria wished two or a dozen handkerchiefs that was her affair. There was not to question why, theirs but to fetch and carry. Alexandria was entirely capable of barking, "Millicent, leave the room!" in fact she had just done so, if more prettily phrased. Hunt the handkerchief, Millicent, and take your time about it. Alexandria, like everyone else in the world, was unpredictable and inconsistent. Gail thought, She's talked this over with Millicent, worn it to rags by now, why go into this act for my benefit? But Gail had no way of gauging how much Alexandria said or didn't say. She realized that Alexandria considered Millicent a bloodless shadow, schooled to obedience, with unseeing eyes and deafened ears, and that Millicent was aware of, and accustomed to, this attitude. Sometimes Alexandria treated her companion as if she were a telephone, sometimes as if she were a mirror, and again as if she were an audience, applauding in the right places. Millicent could be a parrot or an echo, if it pleased her employer. But there were times when Millicent was not taken into Alexandria's confidence. This might, or might not, be one of them.

When Miss Ellis had departed, Alexandria asked impatiently, "Well, what did he say?" Which was, Gail considered, pretty silly. But she projected herself back, into the third grade, and answered obediently, "Just that everything is all right."

"Come, come," said Alexandria, "surely he had time to say a little more than that?"

Gail repeated the conversation, practically verbatim. "So far, so good," Alexandria commented, with her frosty smile, "but I am always suspicious of problems which work out too easily at first trial. I'd advise a cooling-off period before celebration. Don't underestimate your father, Gail."

TWO PARTIES OR THREE?

THE breach between Democrats and Dixiecrats is widening. Plans are announced whereby, after election, the Democratic National Committee will drop those members who bolted to support Thurmond and Wright. Chief among the number will be Gov. Thurmond himself, the Democratic national committeeman from South Carolina. The argument, difficult to resist, is that the Dixiecrats have a perfect right to form a new party, but that they cannot do this and maintain their full rights in the party they have left.

Will the Dixiecrats continue to function as a separate party after this election, thus bringing the two-party system to the South? Or will they align themselves with the Republicans, with whom they have been voting in Congress for some years?

The Dixiecrats thus have at least three choices for the future: rejoin the Democrats, join the Republicans, or continue as a separate party. Some will no doubt try to keep their standing in the Democratic organization. Unless the Democratic leaders change their minds, the bolters are not likely to find the front door standing open.

HONORED HORSES

THE horse, who was man's dearest animal companion until the automobile came along, rarely had the recognition he deserved. Now Bamieca, the horse of Spain's national hero, the Cid, who in the eleventh century was the champion against the Moors, is to have a monument erected by Spain's wealthiest nobleman, the Duke of Alba.

Only two other horses, so far as known, have received comparable honor after their death. Alexander the Great founded the city of Bucephalia in India and named it after his steed Bucephalus. And at Lexington, Va., Washington and Lee University commemorates both Gen. Robert E. Lee, its former president, and Lee's horse, Traveller, as familiar a sight to Southern soldiers on the battle lines as Lee himself. Traveller's skeleton, mounted, stands in the university chapel museum as a recognition that he contributed to his master's greatness.

OLD STORY IN RUSSIA

"In recent years Russia has been like a dormitory in a police station. If someone tried to get up and say a human word, it was regarded as a disturbance of order and security. It called forth only a threatening snarl: 'Mouth shut! Keep down there!' and a powerful hand would push down the lifted head."

This was not written of today, although it might apply. It was written of the tsardom in 1904 by the liberal Prince Trubetskoi. Tyranny in Russia is not a diabolical recent invention, but an ill with which Russian society has been afflicted for centuries.

Forsee Congress Battle | Estimate Program's Cost
West Europe Rearm Plan | Range to Five Billions

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—One of the big legislative battles which preceded World War II seems due for repetition in 1949. This will be regardless of whether Gov. Thomas E. Dewey or President Truman is elected to the presidency.

The battle will be over a multi-billion dollar rearmament program for non-Communist Europe. It will amount to a revival of Lend-Lease, about which a heated dispute arose in the months preceding Pearl Harbor. However, it will hardly be styled Lend-Lease. It will probably call for outright grants.

GOP leaders in Congress say they expect Governor Dewey to submit a program if he is elected, as they assume he will be. The Truman administration has long been at work on such a plan.

Estimates of the cost range from two to five billion dollars. Opposition is looked for from many Republicans and Democrats, particularly since it would probably rule out any further tax cut.

NAVY-AIR FORCE BATTLE—Despite all reports to the contrary, the controversy over which service arm will carry the atomic bomb, if any future ones are dropped, has flared to white heat the old feud between the Navy and the Air Force.

The rivalry between these services will be a major problem for Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to solve if he is elected to the presidency Nov. 2.

The Navy's bid for carrying the bomb arises from the performance expected of the new giant 65,000-ton aircraft carrier, which incidentally will not be finished until 1952. Its argument is that the big

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

The other day in Canton, Ohio, a friend said, "Here's a dollar!" and he handed me a $2 bill. He was having some fun; but it was serious fun because he was just about right. Nevertheless, it might have been very much worse: The dollar might have fallen much lower in purchasing power considering the fact that our national debt amounts to $6,303 per American family. That is a reduction from over $7,000 per family in 1946.

Most of that debt is due to inflationary war spending. This government spends in and out of taxes and loans was, of course, unprecedented and in a measure still continues in our huge expenditures for veterans, for national defense and for ECA. These might be termed war-continuation expenditures.

We go in for fancy words these days and one of them is "dilution of the dollar." By that is meant that the dollar is not worth as much as it used to be, say in the year 1939. It will remain diluted as long as the war-continuation expenditures are being paid out. Undoubtedly the next item in this direction will be the rearming of the nations of Western Europe. There will be some fancy phrase for that, but it will only mean adding on to the Marshall Plan some more billions in the war-continuation process.

The principal items making your dollar worth less are:

1. War-continuation expenditures;
2. The fact that currency and bank deposits have increased faster than the volume of production and business;
3. Pressure for higher wages;
4. Government subsidy and price support for farmers
5. Excessively easy mortgage credit;
6. A non-competitive price which always exists in a seller's market;
7. High cost of government.

Some of these problems are not so serious at this moment; some we can do nothing about; some can be solved by sound administration. Certainly the extravagant cost of government can be reduced. Farm subsidies were intended to sustain farmers against the dangers of a "bust" market; there can be no justification for continuing this system with regard to commodities that are so high as to be almost out of reach.

The Committee on Public Debt Policy shows that if we take the year 1914 as a base and find that the American dollar was worth $1 in that year, then it was worth after two wars:

- 50 cents in 1920
- 57 cents in 1926
- 78 cents in 1933
- 72 cents in 1939
- 42 cents in June, 1948.

It is doing a little better now, but this is not a happy picture. It is also interesting to note that as wages have risen, as between 1939 and 1948, the purchasing power of the dollar has gone down.

That means that although the worker has more money, he buys less for it. When the same piece of steak costs 49 cents a pound one year and $1 a pound the next year, the dollar has been diluted—plenty.

CHAPTER THIRTY-TWO

BRAD HAD MADE her rest after her bath and now it was close to the time when they would be expected by the Wades. Gail finished dressing and they went downstairs to look in on Alexandria and Millicent before leaving.

It was unfortunate that, after a pleasant dinner, the Wades' neighbors, from the next-door apartment, dropped in.

"I asked them," Mrs. Wade told Gail, "as you and Betty know each other and she's anxious to see you again. They moved here just last fall, we became corridor and elevator acquaintances. They seem exceptionally nice and have a charming little boy."

"Betty?" asked Gail, and no warning bell rang in her mind, occupied with other matters. "Her name is Rolland," said Mrs. Wade, "but we're already on an informal basis. Surely you remember her... small, fair, looking younger than she probably is? She was married before, she told me, to a newspaperman. He's been very successful lately... I don't remember his name."

"Sam Meredith," said Gail. "Of course, I'd forgotten Betty's married name." She was aware of Brad's quick glance at her as he sat across the room smoking with and talking to his host.

"Rolland is likable," said Wade. "He's in the insurance business. He hooked me, almost before I knew it, not long after they moved here. As a matter of fact, he did me a real service."

Gail said, "I'd like to see Betty again."

She saw her, shortly afterwards, looking blooming, as blonde, almost as childish in appearance, but a little rounder in figure. She and her husband greeted Gail with cordiality, and Betty said, "It's wonderful seeing you. I assure you I meant to write at the time of your marriage but young Pete was busy having measles."

They had no time alone until Gail was ready to leave, when Betty followed her into the Wade guest room. She asked, "Do you mind my saying how glad I am for you? I was afraid it would be Sam."

"It wasn't," said Gail evenly. "Obviously. But the indications... I mean, you can't help hearing things. Well, you're safe, I'm safe, and Sam's God knows where. California, or was it North Dakota? I don't read him. I used to and maybe it's silly of me, but I just don't any more. I wish you'd come to see us, Gail. I like your husband so much. He and Peter go along famously. I warned Peter, I said, 'If you try to sell him insurance, I'll break your neck! Anyway, do come. Young Pete's at the entertaining if destructive stage, which reminds me we left my sister with him, not that he needs a sister when we're next door, his lungs are all right.'"

Gail said she would and presently found herself in the car, driving home. The night was cool and damp, the sky obscured with clouds. And Brad commented: "You're a good hand, with a personal courier. By the time I see you he will have been seen off on the Commodore Vanderbilt... Hold on a moment, will you?"

While she waited, she felt that someone waited with her, holding his or her breath. Hers of course, Copyright 1947, 1948, by Faith Baldwin Cuthrell. Published by Rinehart & Company, Inc.

"The Rollands are all right... he's a sound egg, and as for his wife, I always liked Sam's taste in girls."

"She's nice," Gail said. "I never knew her well, of course. As a matter of fact, I met her before I met Sam."

She thought with a sudden desperate longing of Sam, not for him exactly, but for his way of life, his unconcern, his blunt, unvarnished attitude... his crazy vigor and lack of veneer. Sam would fight with her, laugh at her, be crazy jealous of any man who'd ever meant anything to her. Sam would wound, neglect and sacrifice her, but he would never conceal himself behind a mask nor armor himself against her. As for her father, Sam would say, The heck with him, and mean just that.

She thought with a terrifying clarity that perhaps she was truly her father's child. Her mother had desired only love for love, and security. Gail had believed that she too wished security, if without love. But her father had never wanted anything except to be free, and alive, and heedless. Perhaps, basically, that was what she wished, the other desires having been imposed upon her. For certainly, ever since Morrison Rogers' appearance, she had felt trapped... not by her father's motivated return but by the Spencers... the close corporation, forbearance, and most unendurable, by her own impatient sense of inadequacy and guilt.

Toward noon on the following morning the telephone rang and Gail, writing letters in her sitting room, answered. Andrews' voice cut in, he apologized and hung up. Gail heard a click as if someone had taken an instrument from an extension. It was not replaced. "Gail?" Brad asked. "Everything all right, dear?"

"Did you have a bad time?" she inquired. "Oh, Brad, I'm so glad you called. I've been sitting on the edge of a volcano ever since you left this morning."

"I couldn't call you before, the business has just been concluded. I'd rather not go into details now, so I'll tell you tonight. Wait a moment—what are you doing this afternoon?"

"Lunching with Pat and her mother first, then we're going on to a fitting."

"I'd forgotten. Why don't you meet me at the St. Regis around half past five? Pat and her mother, too, if they can come. We'll all have a drink and then you and I can come home together."

"I'd love to," she said and added, because it was a long time until five-thirty, "Just tell me one thing... where is he, Brad?"

"In good hands, with a personal courier. By the time I see you he will have been seen off on the Commodore Vanderbilt... Hold on a moment, will you?"

While she waited, she felt that someone waited with her, holding his or her breath. Hers of course, Copyright 1947, 1948, by Faith Baldwin Cuthrell. Published by Rinehart & Company, Inc.

Gail thought angrily. Brad spoke again. "Hello?" he said. "There's a long distance call coming through, Gail. 'Bye, dear, I'll see you this afternoon.'"

She hung up and then went downstairs to the morning room. Alexandria would expect a report however superfluous Gail considered the gesture. She knocked at the closed door, was bidden to enter, and went in to find Alexandria surrounded by mail and papers and Millicent hunched resignedly over the desk.

"Brad just called," Gail said. And stifled the impulse to say, Suppose you tell me what he said?

Alexandria rattled newspapers, pushed the heap of envelopes aside, invited Gail to sit down. Then she asked pleasantly, "Millicent, would you please go upstairs and get me a handkerchief?"

Alexandria's handkerchief was in plain sight on the arm of her chair, a large square of fine, monogrammed linen. Gail's eyes sought and Millicent's eyes avoided it. For if Alexandria wished two or a dozen handkerchiefs that was her affair. There was no question why, theirs but to fetch and carry. Alexandria was entirely capable of barking, "Millicent, leave the room!" in fact she had just done so, if more prettily phrased. Hunt the handkerchief, Millicent, and take your time about it. Alexandria, like everyone else in the world, was unpredictable and inconsistent. Gail thought, She's talked this over with Millicent, worn it to rags by now, why go into this act for my benefit? But Gail had no way of gauging how much Alexandria said or didn't say. She realized that Alexandria considered, Millicent a bloodless shadow, schooled to obedience, with unseeing eyes and deafened ears, and that Millicent was aware of, and accustomed to, this attitude. Sometimes Alexandria treated her companion as if she were a dictaphone, sometimes as if she were a mirror, and again as if she were an audience, applauding in the right places. Millicent could be a parrot or an echo, if it pleased her employer. But there were times when Millicent was not taken into Alexandria's confidence. This might, or might not, be one of them.

When Miss Ellis had departed, Alexandria asked impatiently, "Well, what did he say?"

Which was, Gail considered, pretty silly. But she projected herself back, into the third grade, and answered obediently, "Just that everything is all right."

"Come, come," said Alexandria, "surely he had time to say a little more than that?"

Gail repeated the conversation, practically verbatim.

"So far, so good," Alexandria commented, with her frosty smile, "but I am always suspicious of problems which work out too easily at first trial. I'd advise a cooling-off period before celebration. Don't underestimate your father, Gail."

ONE MAN'S OPINION

The New York Beer drivers' strike which dried up 900 bars rooms set television back five years.

Thirty wrestlers refused to use the pretzel hold in sympathy with the strikers.

But on the whole it was a good thing. 64,000 men got home before 11 p. m. every night for a week and stayed there.

For the next few nights, though, television will feature the political candidates. It will be necessary in some cases to explain that George George still is on the west coast.

Reports are still coming in on how many votes Tallulah Bankhead switched to Truman by citing Dewey's spotless vest.

Let us look at these figures to see what has happened to us:

In 1939, the government of the United States expended $9,000,000,000 and we thought that it was a lot. Then we had a war and we lost all sense of money values as people always do in time of war.

So the government spent, by 1945, $100,000,000,000 in one year. The war is over. We expect to go back at least to 1939. Instead for 1948 we shall spend $39,000,000,000 and probably more.

Now, governments in a free economy are not money makers. Only people produce wealth. The government can only spend what it takes from the earnings of its citizens and the few aliens who pay taxes here. Therefore, that roughly $40,000,000,000 is taken out of the earnings of the people. To keep the people happy while the government engages in huge expenditures, money is made cheap. But the time comes when it is so cheap that it has no value at all. Then the inflation has turned into disaster.

The immediate problem is to reduce the national debt, to reduce government expenditures, to cut out unnecessary subsidies, to lower taxes and to increase the purchasing power of the dollar. It must be done.

Sokolsky's These Days

Let us look at these figures to see what has happened to us: In 1939, the government of the United States expended $9,000,000,000 and we thought that it was a lot. Then we had a war and we lost all sense of money values as people always do in time of war.

So the government spent, by 1945, $100,000,000,000 in one year. The war is over. We expect to go back at least to 1939. Instead for 1948 we shall spend $39,000,000,000 and probably more.

Now, governments in a free economy are not money makers. Only people produce wealth. The government can only spend what it takes from the earnings of its citizens and the few aliens who pay taxes here. Therefore, that roughly $40,000,000,000 is taken out of the earnings of the people. To keep the people happy while the government engages in huge expenditures, money is made cheap. But the time comes when it is so cheap that it has no value at all. Then the inflation has turned into disaster.

The immediate problem is to reduce the national debt, to reduce government expenditures, to cut out unnecessary subsidies, to lower taxes and to increase the purchasing power of the dollar but it must be done.

Boxing Fans Get Break; New Boss Heads Ring Club

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The boxing fan has received a break, if such a thing is possible, through the appointment of Harry Markson as the new managing director of the 20th Century Sporting Club.

Markson is a strange mixture of wisdom in the serpentine ways of pugilism and idealism. He also is dead on the level. He terback, known as "The Little Red Hen of Fulton Street."

Warden Ralph W. Alvis said Strain appeared calm and that he had ordered a last meal of fried chicken, fried oysters, potato salad, biscuits, sweet potato pie and apple cider.

Strain was convicted by a Columbus jury and sentenced last June 17 after his return from the Moundsville, W. Va. state prison where he was serving a life term on a habitual criminal charge.

Browns Win 35-7 Over Yankees

Philadelphia Drops Bears

CLEVELAND, Oct. 25—When votes are cast for the most valuable player in the All-America Conference this year, the name of Otto Graham probably will lead the list.

Graham, his accurate right arm and End Dante Lavelle were the big guns in the Cleveland Browns attack yesterday in Cleveland Stadium where they trounced the New York Yankees, 35-7, before 46,912 fans.

Lavelle, returning to the starting lineup for the first time since a broken leg sidelined him in a pre-season game, snared two Graham touchdown passes, one in the end zone while being covered by two Yankee defense-men.

Graham, who has been nursing a sprained right hand all season, completed 21 of 30 passes for 310 yards. Four passes were good for touchdowns and the other was scored by Graham himself on a 22-yard end run.

THE VICTORY was the 11th straight for the Clevelanders and 17th consecutive game without a defeat over a two year period.

Right Halfback Bob Cowan and Left End Mac Speedie were on the receiving ends of the other Graham aerials. Cowan's play covered 63 yards and Speedie's nine. Both scores were made in the second period within five minutes of each other.

The Yankees' only tally came in the final minute of the last quarter against the Browns' second and third strings.

Buddy Young, speedy Yankee fullback, circled into the clear behind the entire Cleveland team and took a pass from Pete Layden in the end zone to avert a whitewash.

In other pro football games, Philadelphia's Eagles held their first victory today over the mighty Chicago Bears in National Football League history.

The Eagles upset the powerful Chicagoans 12 to 7 in the driving rain before 36,227 fans in Philadelphia Sunday. The win enabled Philadelphia to retain first place in the eastern division while the Bears fell into a first place tie with the Cardinals in the western division.

The Champion Chicago Cardinals tallied 35 points in the third period to outscore the Boston Yanks 49 to 27 before 23,433 in Chicago.

Sole possession of second place in the eastern division fell to the Washington Redskins when they trounced the Green Bay Packers 23 to 7, before 13,433 fans in Milwaukee.

CHARLEY Conerly's passing and running led the New York Giants to a third place tie with Pittsburgh with a 34 to 27 win over the Steelers before 13,433 in New York.

Los Angeles' Rams rallied in the second half to nose out the Detroit Lions 34 to 27 in Detroit.

In the All-America Conference, San Francisco and Cleveland remain tied for first place in the western division. The '49ers trimmed the Baltimore Colts 21 to 10, and the Browns trampled the New York Yankees.

Local Freshmen To Try For 2nd Win Over Lions

Circleville Tiger freshman football squad will take its first road trip of the season to Washington C. H. Tuesday evening to try for its fourth win in five starts.

The Circleville Juniors edged out the Junior Blue Lion earlier in the season, 20-14, battling in a quagmire-like playing field.

In addition to having bested the Blue Lion frosh, the local juniors have posted wins over Canal Winchester and Greenfield. The one loss was the season opener against Lancaster.

Tiger juniors will have their own cheerleaders at the Tuesday tilt, the same group which has spurred them on at all home games. The junior cheerleading squad is composed of Joan Lewas, Donna Jean Cline, Martha Barthelmas, Doris Edgington and Gene Clifton.

Probable starting Circleville lineup for the fracas is: Johnson, LE; Cockrel, LT; Kerns, LG; Bartholomew, C; Ford, RG; Coffland, RT; Turner or McClarren, RE; Rooney, QB; Raymond, LH; George, RH; and Sowers, FB.

Gametime of the junior encounter is 7 p. m.

Alumni Cage Loop Is Set

8 Teams Enter League Play

Pickaway County Alumni have banded together to form a brand new eight-team basketball league.

Frank Wilkins, president of the new league, said the loop would begin play in Pickaway Fairgrounds Coliseum during the first week of November.

Teams entered in competition are two groups from Scioto Township, called Scioto 1 and 2; Circleville high school, and units from Monroe, Walnut Pickaway, Jackson and Deer Creek Townships.

All league games are scheduled on one night each week, with the first team to take the floor at 7 p. m., followed by the other three at hourly intervals.

Two rounds of play have been set up in the loop, with each team playing seven games. Winner of the first loop will meet second round winner for championship title in March.

Any graduate from a school entered in the league is eligible to play on that team, although a few exceptions have been made.

Alumni of Muhlenberg Township school will be allowed to play with either Monroe or Jackson teams, and grads from Washington Township will be permitted to play with Walnut or Pickaway.

A meeting of team managers and grads interested in the league is to be held in the coliseum Sunday, when rules and regulation standards will be completed.

Schedule for the first week calls for Scioto No. 1 to play Circleville at 7 p. m.; Monroe to meet Scioto No. 2 at 8 p. m.; Walnut to play Jackson at 9 p. m.; and the evening clincher, Pickaway vs. Deer Creek at 10 p. m.

Red Wings Nab Ice Loop Lead

By International News Service
The Detroit Red Wings moved into first place in the National Hockey League today.

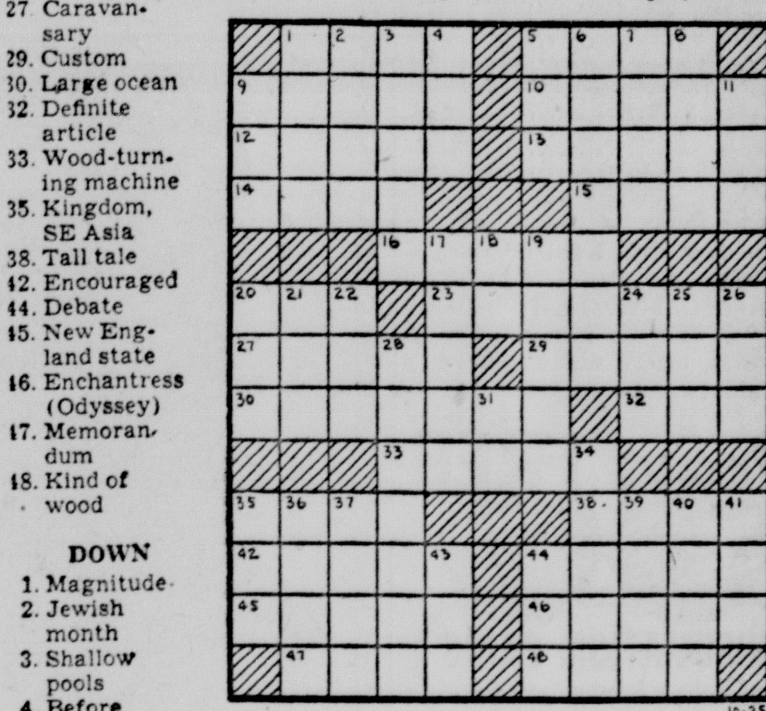

The hard skating Wings defeated the World Champion Toronto Maple Leafs 2 to 1 before a record crowd of 15,346 in Detroit.

Boston's Bruins chalked up their third straight victory by trouncing the injury-riddled New York Rangers 4 to 1 before 13,000 fans in Boston.

The win placed the Bruins in a second place tie with the idle Montreal Canadiens.

OLD-FASHIONED FOOTBALL

Ohio State, Northwestern Await Tell-Tale Battle

CHICAGO, Oct. 25—Ohio State, a 20-to-1 outsider in pre-season calculations, goes for an inside shot at the Rose Bowl and an outside shot at the Big Nine title next Saturday against Northwestern in Evanston, Ill.

Both elevens have won two and lost one in Western Conference play. Their records put them in a second-place tie with Indiana in the loop standings.

But, it will be something of a rare feat if Indiana, a 21-to-14

bower to Pitt, can win another game.

That leaves the Buckeyes and the Wildcats to fight it out behind an unbeaten Michigan team which can't go to the Rose Bowl.

That's the only place the Wolverines apparently can't go, having spent Saturday afternoon coming from behind twice to beat Minnesota, 27 to 14. An all-time record crowd of 65,130 saw Michigan run its winning streak to 19 in a row.

Crooksville Dogs Dominate Field Trials Sunday

Fred Hill of Crooksville dominated the Pickaway County Bird Dog Club Fall trials in Scioto River bottomland Sunday by copping highest honors in both classified events.

Hill's Fearless Mad Anthony was chosen champion of the All Age Stake event early Sunday morning and again topped the field in Derby Stakes in the afternoon with his dog, Fanny.

John Eshelman's Highland Touchstone Dixie was the only local dog to place in the trials. It was awarded second position in the All Age contest.

Third place in the first event was won by Dainty Dot, handled by M. F. Perfect of Columbus. Second place in the derby contest was garnered by Stanforth John, handled by John Stanforth of Hillsboro, and third place post was won by Sam's Spunky, handled by Homer Bowsher, of Xenia.

ALL WINNERS and placers in the Sunday trials were awarded cups for their efforts. A total of 35 pheasants, two to a brace, were released in the bottomland for the trials.

Ralph Wallace, president of the Pickaway County club, said the next trials will be held in the Spring. Other officers and members of the club are R. B. Anderson, secretary; Leo McClure, treasurer; Ralph McDill, John Eshelman and Fred Houston.

Drobny Grabs Pan-Am Title

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 25—Czechoslovakia's Jaroslav Drobny today holds the men's singles Pan-American tennis title for the second year in succession.

Drobny defeated Eric Sturgess of South Africa in the final round, 9-7, 6-2, 6-2.

The American tandem of Dick Gonzales and Frank Parker defeated Drobny and Sturgess in the men's doubles final. The score was 7-9, 6-2, 8-6, 6-2.

Grabiner Rites Due Wednesday

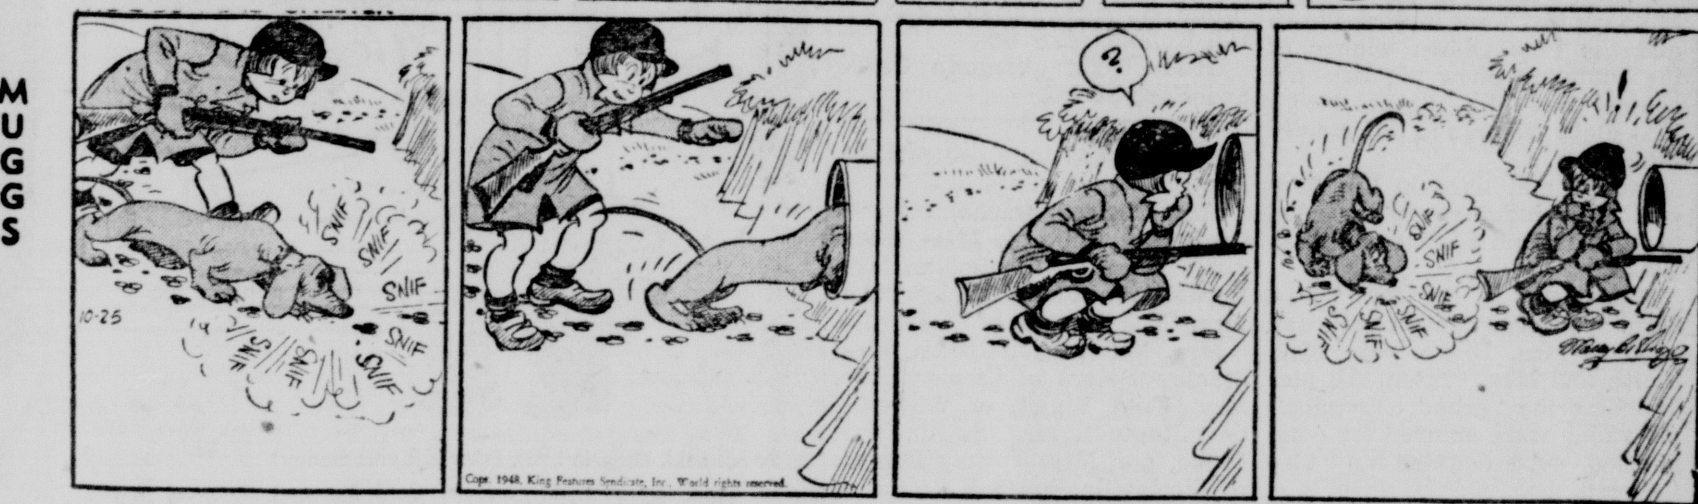

CHICAGO, Oct. 25—Friends and relatives of Harry Grabiner are arriving in Chicago today to attend funeral services for the late vice-president of the Cleveland Indians.

Grabiner died in St. Luke's hospital yesterday at the age of 57.

Funeral services will be held here Wednesday.

Grabiner entered the hospital a week ago for a check-up and underwent surgery Friday for the removal of a brain tumor.

Although the operation seemed successful, Grabiner's health declined rapidly.

Los Angeles Rams rallied in the second half to nose out the Detroit Lions 34 to 27 in Detroit.

In the All-America Conference, San Francisco and Cleveland remain tied for first place in the western division. The '49ers trimmed the Baltimore Colts 21 to 10, and the Browns trampled the New York Yankees.

Local Freshmen To Try For 2nd Win Over Lions

Circleville Tiger freshman football squad will take its first road trip of the season to Washington C. H. Tuesday evening to try for its fourth win in five starts.

The Circleville Juniors edged out the Junior Blue Lion earlier in the season, 20-14, battling in a quagmire-like playing field.

In addition to having bested the Blue Lion frosh, the local juniors have posted wins over Canal Winchester and Greenfield. The one loss was the season opener against Lancaster.

Tiger juniors will have their own cheerleaders at the Tuesday tilt, the same group which has spurred them on at all home games. The junior cheerleading squad is composed of Joan Lewis, Donna Jean Cline, Martha Barthelmas, Doris Edgington and Gene Clifton.

Probable starting Circleville lineup for the fracas is: Johnson, LE; Cockrel, LT; Kerns, LG; Bartholomew, C; Ford, RG; Coffland, RT; Turner or McClarren, RE; Rooney, QB; Raymond, LH; George, RH; and Sowers, FB.

Game time of the junior encounter is 7 p. m.

Alumni Cage Loop Is Set

8 Teams Enter League Play

Pickaway County Alumni have banded together to form a brand new eight-team basketball league.

Frank Wilkins, president of the new league, said the loop would begin play in Pickaway Fairgrounds Coliseum during the first week of November.

Teams entered in competition are two groups from Scioto Township, called Scioto 1 and 2; Circleville high school, and units from Monroe, Walnut Pickaway, Jackson and Deer Creek Townships.

All league games are scheduled on one night each week, with the first team to take the floor at 7 p. m., followed by the other three at hourly intervals.

Two rounds of play have been set up in the loop, with each team playing seven games. Winner of the first loop will meet second round winner for championship title in March.

Any graduate from a school entered in the league is eligible to play on that team, although a few exceptions have been made.

Alumni of Muhlenberg Township school will be allowed to play with either Monroe or Jackson teams, and grads from Washington Township will be permitted to play with Walnut or Pickaway.

A meeting of team managers and grads interested in the league is to be held in the coliseum Sunday, when rules and regulation standards will be completed.

Schedule for the first week calls for Scioto No. 1 to play Circleville at 7 p. m.; Monroe to meet Scioto No. 2 at 8 p. m.; Walnut to play Jackson at 9 p. m.; and the evening clincher, Pickaway vs. Deer Creek at 10 p. m.

OLD-FASHIONED FOOTBALL

Ohio State, Northwestern Await Tell-Tale Battle

CHICAGO, Oct. 25—Ohio State, bower to Pitt, can win another a 20-to-1 outsider in pre-season calculations, goes for an inside shot at the Rose Bowl and an outside shot at the Big Nine title next Saturday against Northwestern in Evanston, Ill.

Both elevens have won two and lost one in Western Conference play. Their records put them in a second-place tie with Indiana in the loop standings.

But, it will be something of a rare feat if Indiana, a 21-to-14

crushed Syracuse, 48 to 0, in Evanston, and Ohio State defeated Wisconsin, 34 to 32, in Columbus.

Wisconsin plays at Iowa next Saturday and Minnesota entertains Indiana. Illinois, which upset Purdue, 10 to 6, meets Michigan in Ann Arbor while Purdue faces Marquette at home in a non-conference game.

The contest of importance is the OSU-Northwestern tilt. The Wildcats, which figure to be rested after their breather against Syracuse, will be favored.

One observer who's been scouting Ohio State of late says he's seen "more plain old-fashioned football" from Wes Fesler's Buckeyes than from any other club this season. Of course, he hasn't seen them all. But he has seen Northwestern.

Both teams should be "up" for this one, though their last Saturday performances may react on them. Ohio State had a lot taken out of it going all the way to edge Wisconsin. Northwestern may have gotten an inflated view of its own abilities by the ease with which it overcame Syracuse.

The team that took the real banging around was Iowa, however. The Hawks played Notre Dame Saturday in Iowa City and suffered the consequences, 27 to 12. It was quite a ball game for a while. Iowa tied the score once and came within two yards of doing it again.

Grabner Rites Due Wednesday

CHICAGO, Oct. 25—Friends and relatives of Harry Grabner are arriving in Chicago today to attend funeral services for the late vice-president of the Cleveland Indians.

Grabner died in St. Luke's hospital yesterday at the age of 57.

Funeral services will be held here Wednesday.

Grabner entered the hospital a week ago for a check-up and underwent surgery Friday for the removal of a brain tumor.

Although the operation seemed successful, Grabner's health declined rapidly.

Drobny Grabs Pan-Am Title

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 25—Czechoslovakia's Jaroslav Drobny today holds the men's singles Pan-American tennis title for the second year in succession.

Drobny defeated Eric Sturgess of South Africa in the final round, 9-7, 6-2, 6-2.

The American tandem of Dick Gonzales and Frank Parker defeated Drobny and Sturgess in the men's doubles final. The score was 7-9, 6-2, 8-6, 6-2.

Mrs. John Heiskell Is County's Champion Pie-Baker

Pumpkin Show Chief Makes Award

Radio-Phonograph Goes To Winner

Pickaway County's Grand Champion pumpkin pie baker of 1948 is Mrs. John Heiskell, of 335 East Union street, who won three first prizes in the daily contests held each day of the Pumpkin Show.

Mrs. Heiskell's efforts to please the judges' palates were rewarded Saturday night when she was awarded a combination phonograph by Mayor Thurman I. Miller in behalf of Pumpkin Show, Inc.

In Saturday night's judging at the Youth Canteen booth on West Main street, the tasty pastry entered by the Grand Champion was in competition with pies entered by the five other daily winners.

They were Mrs. Ralph Kerns of Circleville Route 1, Mrs. John Mast of Circleville Route 3, Mrs. Dudley Carpenter, Mrs. Bernard Smith and Mrs. Vernon Blake of Circleville.

Three Circleville women monopolized the two pie baking contests which were judged Saturday noon at the Lutheran parish house.

FIRST PRIZE in the General Mills contest went to Mrs. Smith and the blue ribbon winner of the Pumpkin Show pie baking contest was Mrs. Blake, both first place winners in other daily judging.

Second and third in the General Mills judging was awarded to Mrs. Harold Clifton and Mrs. Blake.

Runnersup in the Pumpkin Show sponsored contest Saturday noon to Mrs. Blake were Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Clifton. All pies including the "grand champion" pie which were entered for competition were donated to the Canteen.

When asked before the microphone at Court and Main streets to what she attributed her success in the contest, Mrs. Heiskell answered modestly: "Pumpkin pie is my favorite pie."

She confided later that she had a secret recipe and a "certain twist of the wrist" in mixing the pumpkin filler that was handed down in her family for many years.

Meanwhile, it appeared that husband, John, who was a spark-plug behind the Pumpkin Show program, and the Heiskell children are the real beneficiaries in Mrs. Heiskell's culinary specialties.

Each day of the Circleville carnival, Pumpkin Show, Inc., and General Mills each sponsored a pie baking contest. It was from the two first place winners in each of these events that the "grand champion" was selected. Consolation prizes were awarded by the food firm sponsoring part of the contest to the five other daily winners in the pumpkin pie contest.

WHILE THIS was the first year a pie baking contest became a regular part of the Pumpkin Show program, officials said Saturday that the contest would be included in future schedules.

Daily winners in the Pumpkin Show contest were awarded prizes of $5—first, $3—second, and $2—third. General Mills gave its first three winners kitchenware and utensils for prizes.

Bishop Lashes Beauties Again

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 25.—A clash between beauty contest entrants and the Catholic church has flared anew here.

Bishop John H. Swint of the Wheeling Catholic diocese announced that he would extend his edict against beauty contest entrants to include their parents.

The bishop previously said he would excommunicate participants in beauty contests during the state beauty pageant last Summer in Moundsville.

Backing up the statement, Bishop Swint forced 19-year-old Mariruth Ford of Wheeling into leaving the church when she refused to drop out of the contest.
